FOREWORD

This is the thirty-seventh formal annual report on statutory revision issued in compliance with section 41-1304.01, Arizona Revised Statutes. Corrective legislation has been offered in recent years resulting in the correction and improvement of scores of defective, multiple, inconsistent and otherwise inadequate statutory enactments.

While errors in the various constitutional and statutory provisions can come about through typographical and other inadvertencies, more typically these arise from an incomplete understanding of a legislator's request, inconsistent simultaneous enactments or unanticipated effects on other statutes. This staff compilation is the indirect result of other functions performed by both professional and clerical personnel of the entire legislature. These problems have been located by attentive typists, professional staff who prepare bills and review drafts with a goal of avoiding problems and a view to compiling lists of noted errors and proofreaders whose work, if well done, goes generally unnoticed. Through these processes, as a by-product of staff postsession revision and publication preparation work, and from knowledgeable public officials and others who deal with the statutes, these many areas of possible statutory improvement have been selected for legislative recommendation.

Legislative staff are cognizant of the pressing demands on legislators' time, the conflicting motivations for various amendments and the general desire to deal with substantive rather than technical matters. To the extent, however, that staff can prepare and legislators can use the corrected versions of the various defective statutes and the technical changes in others, dramatic improvements in the clarity and consistency of the statutory law can be obtained.

PREFACE

This report notes hundreds of problem provisions in Arizona statutory and constitutional sections. Those statutes included in Section III have a brief indication of the suggested change or area for review to be considered in the preparation of proposed legislation.

Section IV reviews some inadequacies in the state constitution. Since, however, any change in our basic law requires the submission of a proposition to the electorate, these suggestions are brief. Any intended addition to repeal or rewrite constitutional text should be cautiously conducted. Since technical changes may make a ballot proposition more confusing, care should be taken in evaluating a proposed improvement gain against its possible negative impact on the substantive aspect of the proposition.

The annual reviser's technical corrections bill proposal involves the multiple enactment activities, inconsistent statutes and defective dispositions of statutory text. Each is briefly described in the respective bill purpose section. Not included because of their need for policy direction or further information for guidance in the preparation of improvement measures are various other problem situations with which Legislative Council staff and others will need to deal directly with legislators as the relevant statutes become involved in bills. The reviser's technical corrections bill for 2011 is Senate Bill 1419.

I. STATUTORY IMPROVEMENT

The Arizona Revised Statutes developed through the bulk revision of all general laws of the state under the Arizona Code Commission as authorized by the Arizona Legislature in 1951. The proposed recodification was enacted in Laws 1955, Third Special Session, chapter 3. A twenty volume set containing the Constitutions of the United States and Arizona, laws, court rules, tables and indexing was prepared under authority of Laws 1956, chapter 129 and included legislation enacted through the Twenty-second Legislature, Second Regular Session.

The Arizona Revised Statutes contains in excess of twenty-two thousand separate sections of statutory law as organized into forty-nine titles. The titles are broad principal subjects that are arranged in alphabetical order except for title 1 (general provisions), title 28 (transportation), title 38 (public employees), title 47 (uniform commercial code), title 48 (special taxing districts) and title 49 (the environment). As appropriate, the titles are divided into chapters and subdivided into articles grouping the several sections by related subject matter.

The arrangement of material in the 1956 publication placed the general laws in volumes 2 through 15 of the Arizona Revised Statutes. The federal and state constitutions and indexing to such, the enabling act and various treaties were included in volume 1. Volumes 16 and 17 contained the rules of civil and criminal procedure and the rules of court. Volume 18 consisted of tables tracing the placement of session law material through the various prior codifications and into the Arizona Revised Statutes. The index material for volumes 2 through 15 comprised volumes 19 and 20.

Through the varied amendment activity, the addition and repeal of laws and bulk transfers of material through departmental reorganization legislation, the several titles of the Arizona Revised Statutes have not developed with uniformity in the fifty-five years since the Arizona Revised Statutes codification. A breakdown of general statute material by sections reflects a range of from a dozen to eight hundred or more sections of law in the several titles of the Arizona Revised Statutes.

To maintain the quality of the Arizona Revised Statutes, the Legislature has granted continuing revision authority to the Arizona Legislative Council. As necessary, problems with section, article and chapter headings, typographical errors and multiple amendment and placement difficulties in newly enacted laws are corrected under this revision authority by the Legislative Council.

Provision was made in the bound Arizona Revised Statutes volumes for annual pocket parts to supplement as necessary the original code material and for annotations to reflect more recent legislative and judicial statements.

Because of the bulk of supplemental material in some of the volumes of the Arizona Revised Statutes the publisher was forced to begin to recompile statutes and annotations by reprinting. The first such project was the 1970 reprinting of volume 8.

In 1972, the Legislative Council reviewed this situation and established with the publisher a continuing program for the replacement of volumes of the Arizona Revised Statutes. It was agreed that designated volumes would be selected and, as appropriate, the material divided before republication to make provision for future growth. Thus the material contained in volumes 16 and 17 was recompiled, as altered subsequent to the 1956 republication, for publication in new volumes 16, 17, 17A and 17B. Similarly the very active subject areas of titles 14, 15 and 16 (decedents' estates, education and elections) as previously contained in volume 6 were combined with the six titles previously contained in volume 7 for a more suitable realignment into republished volumes 6, 6A, 6B and 7. In the fall of 1976 the material contained in volumes 9 and 10, including titles 25 through 32 (marital and domestic relations through professions and occupations), was recompiled into new volumes 9, 9A, 10 and 10A. A one-volume republication of volume 2 was prepared in 1974. In the fall of 1977 new volume 3, including titles 9, 10 and 11 (cities and towns, corporations and associations and counties), was recompiled and published. Also a one-volume cumulative index was added.

Title 13 (criminal code) was republished in the fall of 1978 in two volumes, 5 and 5A. Titles 42 and 43 (taxation and taxation of income) were republished in the fall of 1980 in two volumes, 13 and 13A. Title 12 (courts and civil proceedings) was republished in the winter of 1981 in two volumes, 4 and 4A. In 1982, the index was republished in three volumes, 19, 20 and 21. In 1983, titles 23 and 24 (labor and livestock and animals) were republished as volumes 8 and 8A.

The Constitution of Arizona was republished into two volumes, 1 and 1A, in the spring of 1984, and, reflecting the continuing active subject matter of title 15 (education) in the winter of 1984 volume 6A was republished into two volumes, volume 6A containing title 15 and volume 6B containing titles 16 (elections) and 17 (game and fish). In December of 1985, titles 38 through 41 were republished in two volumes, 12 and 12A. Additionally in 1986 a new title 49 titled "The Environment" was created. Titles republished in 1986 included titles 36 (public health and safety), 37 (public lands) and 32 (professions and occupations), and in 1987 republished volumes included volume 16 (rules of civil procedure) and volume 17 (rules of criminal procedure). With the renumbering of the uniform commercial code into new title 47 and consolidation of statutes relating to special taxing districts in title 48, volume 14 containing titles 44 (trade and commerce) and 45 (waters) was republished in 1987. In 1988, volume 15 was republished to contain titles 46 (welfare) and 47 (the uniform commercial code). The concept of ongoing statute revision and the supporting Legislative Council decision to authorize a scheduled republication program are manifestations of a commitment to avoid costly multiyear bulk statutory revision projects. The requirements of ongoing revision, however, are stringent. To meet the demands of this alternative the Legislature must have before it, consider and enact, to the extent feasible, scores of housekeeping changes for improvement of the laws.

The current set of Arizona Revised Statutes materials consists of the following:

II. REVISION PROGRAM AND IMPROVEMENT LIMITATIONS

Minor irregularities in the statutes frequently result from an incomplete rewrite of the law or a hasty amendment. Under the revision authority of sections 41-1304.01 and 41-1304.02, Arizona Revised Statutes, the Legislative Council staff, in the preparation of new enactments for Arizona Revised Statutes publication, may renumber and rearrange text material, make certain word substitutions and correct manifest clerical, typographical and electronic database errors. Arizona's experience in the administrative correction of legislation has indicated that such changes and corrections are both wise and practical. While the type of error with which we are concerned may well be inevitable in the course of a session that may consider hundreds of bills, the same volume of work in the next session increases the difficulty of reenacting the same legislation in order to correct it. The procedure developed by the Legislative Council for handling the revision of each session's enactments is briefly described in the following paragraphs:

The staff reads each chapter as it is received and enters in the computer each A.R.S. section specifically affected by that chapter, notes whether the section is added, repealed, amended, repealed and reenacted or transferred and notes the effective date of the activity. This information becomes the Table of Sections Affected. Each section of a chapter must be analyzed for impact on the present statutes. A one-line repeal of a single article may result in the repeal of twenty sections contained in that article, any one or several of which may conceivably be amended by another chapter. Or, as happened in 1974, a chapter in Arizona Revised Statutes consisting of fifty sections was repealed and replaced by a new chapter of sixty-five sections without regard to the fact that the last fifteen section numbers were already in use in the following existing A.R.S. chapter. That error in placement necessitated extensive renumbering of the new material and its internal references.

The Table of Sections Affected is essential. If more than one chapter affects a single specific A.R.S. section, the two entries are bracketed for further attention. In the early days of the session, a duplicative situation may be corrected by the Legislature when its attention is called to that situation. Of course, duplicate or defective amendments are more likely to occur and far less likely to be able to be remedied in the closing rush of the session.

The Table of Sections Affected has several uses. It points out sections with duplicate numbers, sections that are amended more than once, with or without conflicting material or effective dates, and sections that may have been both amended and repealed by different chapters. It is also a useful guide later in checking publication of the A.R.S. material in the supplements and pocket parts or in the republished volumes to ensure the completeness and accuracy of such published material and in checking the accuracy of the publisher's list of sections affected.

In reading each chapter, each member of the professional staff, while keeping in mind restrictive revision guidelines, notes apparent errors on a set of the chapters. Often a bill drafter finds an error in an act occasioned by amendment of a bill that he or she drafted originally, or clerical staff of the Senate, House or Council see an error in the final act. Separate staff readings of chapters have been found to be a desirable system since experience has indicated that it is almost impossible for one reader to simultaneously locate all of the various errors in sense, typing and form when reading more than 1,000 pages of text in a rather brief time. Furthermore, the new chapters must be code-checked, or proofread against current law, because corrections in existing law are not made by way of revision authority. Any error that exists in a current statute and that is unchanged in the new statute is noted for reference and possible future improvement but is left unchanged. The staff meets after all chapters have been read to discuss the errors found and, if these are characterized as proper subjects for administrative correction, to agree on the form and substance of reviser's notes for each. The revised chapters and notes are then sent to West, a Thomson business, for use in the preparation of pocket part and softbound statute materials for the ensuing year and to LexisNexis for softbound publication.

In reviewing the chapters the staff may conclude that a section that has been added, amended or repealed may be potentially defective due to a violation of the Constitution of Arizona. This may occur when the amendment of the section is not identified in the title for the chapter or an incorrect version is used in amending a section.

No administrative correction or recommendation for correction is made if there has been an omission of a part of existing law with no indication that it was meant to be deleted or if an internal reference is not only erroneous but ambiguous, so that the choice of what was meant involves a possible substantive choice or if there is a misspelled or incorrect choice of a word that cannot be corrected without a substantive decision. Punctuation is not corrected unless it can be accomplished without any possibility of changing the intent.

After each legislative session adjourns the staff prepares blends of multiple legislative activity under authority of section 41-1304.03, Arizona Revised Statutes, and reviews those revision corrections that may create an issue as to authority to correct.

The blending approach to multiple legislative dispositions of statute material as provided for in section 41-1304.03, Arizona Revised Statutes, was initiated by a legislative leadership proposal and enacted in 1969 after several successive years of confronting statutory corrections bills at the beginning of the session designed to correct multiple amendments of prior sessions. The situation contemplated by section 41-1304.03, Arizona Revised Statutes, does not arise in states where the later chapter by strict statutory rule of construction automatically takes precedence over the earlier chapter but does arise in the vast majority of states in which enactments of a session are deemed simultaneous and to be construed together to the extent that they are not incompatible.

In each blend proposal the two or more chapters involved must appear to be free of constitutional defect and be substantively compatible with each other, and the applicable effective dates in each must be on or before the general effective date that applies to nonemergency legislation enacted during the session or before or shortly after the publication date of the statutes. Multiple sections that are not blended involve sections in which one version has a delayed effective date, the versions are inconsistent or incompatible, the staff believes that one or more versions have constitutional defects or one version is approved as an emergency act while the Legislature is in session and the subsequent version is amended without including the amendments made by the emergency act. For each blend West, a Thomson business, is instructed to indicate the involved chapter versions in the source note and to include a reviser's note explanation of the blend. Sixty-six multiple amendment situations in the Laws 2010 enactments were blended. They involved the following A.R.S. sections and chapters:

1. 5-504 (7th Spec. Sess. Ch. 12 and 2nd Reg. Sess. Ch. 126)

A copy of the text and explanation of each blend is on file at the offices of the Legislative Council.

Additionally, the staff may submit memos to provide information to the Legislative Council regarding other enactment irregularities. Such items, while suitable for correction only through the enactment of further legislation, are those deemed to be of sufficient importance to require an evaluation and explanation before inclusion in future legislative correction or improvement proposals.

If the hundreds of administrative or revision corrections and Legislative Council blends and corrections made through these described processes had not been made, all these problems could have been addressed only by full legislative consideration of bills. The success rate of these legislative proposals in this and most states has not been notable, since it is quite difficult for these technical matters to compete for attention and support with the crucial substantive issues before each legislature. Therefore, over the course of many legislative sessions numerous revision proposals have been enacted.

The 2010 reviser's technical corrections bill was passed as Laws 2010, chapter 117.

The proposal for consideration in the 2011 regular session is Senate Bill 1419 to correct multiple, defective and inconsistent enactments. Many additional problem sections are either described or recommended for specified improvement attention in Section III of this report. Without the revision corrections made by the described revision procedures, many additional statute sections would also have been appropriate for inclusion in the 2011 correctional proposal. Even without being remedied under revision authority or included in legislative improvement proposals, the identification of statute errors or inadequacies is in itself valuable. Thus, bill drafters and others can use the suggested improvements in preparing substantive changes for the noted problem sections.

A device that is annually updated as an adjunct of revision activities is the Arizona Revised Statutes Internal Reference Manual. The manual lists each section of the permanent statutory law in which another section is specifically mentioned, thus giving drafters instant access to other sections in the same or other titles that may need amendment when the listed section is amended. The manual is particularly valuable when a whole title or chapter is rewritten or when statutes are reorganized or repealed.

Additional statute errors that were beyond revision authority or that were overlooked in changes before the A.R.S. publication of a new provision frequently present difficulties to one attempting to have them changed by statute. While some of these examples may seem too trivial for legislative attention there is, unfortunately, no other method for their correction.

III. RECOMMENDED STATUTORY IMPROVEMENTS

The following statutory provisions contain defects, inconsistencies or form and style problems of which legislative staff should be aware. Please note, however, that less significant drafting errors, such as the misuse of future tense instead of present tense or passive voice instead of active voice and use of a negative subject, are not usually incorporated in this listing. It is intended instead that in any amendment of a section drafters will seek to effectuate the improvement of that text to the extent acceptable to the bill sponsor.

IV. CONSTITUTIONAL DEFECTS

It is desirable that the state constitution proclaim the legal framework of statute and case law through concise, understandable and compatible provisions. However, because the constitutional amendment process requires a vote of the people, many provisions of the text of the Arizona Constitution contain outmoded or inconsistent language. Since only an initiative, referendum or constitutional convention can address such problems, many items of possible improvement remain. One such area is the inconsistent use of article, part, section and paragraph designations.

Other suggested improvements are:

1. Article II, section 34. This section does not authorize "industrial pursuits" by counties but A.R.S. section 11-281 does.

2. Article IV, part 1, section 1 (3). This prevents the legislature from authorizing anything except emergency or general effective dates (except for appropriations). If provision were made to direct the effective date of emergency legislation, the legislature could address problems involving time factors such as implementing provisions on July 1, the beginning of the fiscal year.

3. Article IV, part 2, section 4. This refers to "postmaster of the fourth class" that was removed as a postal service designation in 1970 pursuant to 39 United States Code section 702.

4. Article IV, part 2, section 19 (1) and (7). "[D]ivorces" should be "ANNULMENTS OR DISSOLUTIONS OF MARRIAGE" and "crimes and misdemeanors" should be "CRIMINAL OFFENSES".

5. Article IV, part 2, section 21. Strike the first sentence and rewrite the second sentence to state "The terms of office of the members of the legislature are two years."

6. Article IV, part 2, section 23. Strike "from any railroad or other corporation".

7. Article VI, section 14 (9). Strike "Divorce and for" and after "annulment" insert "AND DISSOLUTION".

8. Article VII, section 6. Strike "soldier, seaman, or marine, in the army or navy" and insert "MILITARY PERSONNEL".

9. Article VIII, part 1, section 6. This section requires the legislature to enact certain provisions relating to paying of a recalled officer's campaign expenses. The statutory section was repealed in 1973.

10. Article IX, section 2. Subsections (8), (9) and (10) violate the 14th amendment of the United States Constitution. See Benjamin v. Arizona Department of Revenue (C 586227).

11. Article IX, section 3. The provision requiring payment of taxes "in money only" should be stricken.

12. Article IX, section 5. This section imposing a three hundred fifty thousand dollar state debt ceiling has been interpreted with so many exceptions that a revision may be appropriate.

13. Article IX, section 11. The references to "From and after December 31, 1973" should be deleted.

14. Article IX, section 15. The language "Commencing January 1, 1965," should be deleted.

15. Article IX, section 16. The language "Commencing January 1, 1967," should be deleted.

16. Article IX, section 17. In subsection (2), paragraph (a) correct the spelling of "institutions".

17. Article IX, section 20. In subsection (10), strike "after July 1, 1980" and strike the last sentence in subsection (10).

18. Article IX, section 21. In subsection (4), paragraph (d), subdivision (i), after "sale" strike the comma and insert "OR" and strike "or rental" and insert "FOR ANY PERIOD OF TIME". In subsection (7), strike "beginning with the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1980".

19. Article IX, section 22. Before "(A)" insert "SECTION 22."

20. Article X, section 3. In the last sentence of the lead-in, after "in" insert "THIS" and strike "X contained".

21. Article X, section 5. Strike "three dollars per acre" and insert "THEIR TRUE APPRAISED VALUE" and strike "twenty-five dollars per acre" and insert "THEIR TRUE APPRAISED VALUE BASED ON SUSCEPTIBILITY OF IRRIGATION".

22. Article XI, section 5. After the first "The" insert "MEMBERS OF THE ARIZONA BOARD OF"; strike "[u]niversity, and the governing boards of other state educational institutions" and insert "UNIVERSITIES"; insert "ARIZONA" before "board" and strike "of the university".

23. Article XI, section 6. In the first sentence, strike "University" and insert "UNIVERSITIES".

24. Article XI, section 8. In the first paragraph, after "common" insert "AND HIGH".

25. Article XII, section 3. Strike the last paragraph.
26. Article XIV, section 3. This provision applies only to events that were significant at the time of constitutional ratification and should be stricken.
27. Article XVI, section 2. Strike "as now exist under the laws of the Territory of Arizona or" and strike "hereafter".
28. Article XX, paragraphs 3 and 9. These provisions are outdated but cannot be amended without congressional approval.
29. Article XXII, sections 1 through 12. These sections apply only to events that were significant at the time of constitutional ratification and should be stricken.

V. MULTIPLE ENACTMENT ACTIVITY - RECOMMENDATIONS

In order that multiple chapter treatments of a section of law during a single legislative session will not destroy each other, the courts generally have construed the various versions of such sections together to reconcile them, give effect to each and avoid implied repeals. Since, however, the courts may find any such enactments to be irreconcilable, to the extent that a later enactment can be altered while in progress in order to avert the need of any litigation, the legislation should be modified to clarify the legislative intent involved in the instant enactment vis-a-vis previous enactments of the session.

If a previous measure that has become effective has added, amended or transferred a section that is to be dealt with in the instant measure:

1. The current activity should be interpreted in regard to the previous enactment.
2. If the respective versions are compatible, the instant one should amend the previous one. For reader convenience, even if the previous enactment is effective because of an emergency clause, it is preferable to use the citation to the new enactment:

"Section 4-101, Arizona Revised Statutes, as amended by Laws 2005, chapter 20, section 1".

Alternatively, the previously enacted version may be repealed and its contents incorporated into a new version of law.

3. An intended transfer and renumbering or repeal of material should be reviewed in conjunction with the previous activity and, as appropriate, be provided for through specific citation to the previous enactment.

If a previous measure that is not currently effective will become effective before or contemporaneously with the instant one, the treatments outlined above are applicable, except that while it is desirable that the different versions be worked together they may be independent of one another if not conflicting and if the previous version is used as the basis for the current activity it should be specifically cited.

Sections that have been repealed earlier in a legislative session should not be amended, transferred or incorporated by internal reference in a later measure. If the repeal has already taken effect a new section may be added to the statutes in the same or similar placement. If the repealed material needs mere reinstatement for use with the instant proposal, the repeal, if not yet effective, may be repealed and a statement of the specific intention of reestablishing the previous section included in the instant measure, but preferably a new section that duplicates the text of the prior one should be added to the statutes. If any change is anticipated in the text of the prior provision it is always desirable to add the new section to the statutes to replace the repealed one.

Chapters enacted earlier in a legislative session that make additions to the statutes should be considered as to possible conflicts with the instant measure. However, mere duplication in the use of Arizona Revised Statutes numbering in the addition of nonconflicting new material does not create a difficulty since the Legislative Council revision authority allows such material to be renumbered.

If a statute that is to be treated in the instant measure has been handled by a previous enactment that delayed the effectiveness of involved provisions, the current situation is rather complex. It may well be necessary to handle both the currently effective provision and the one that awaits delayed effectiveness. In so doing, each version treated must be specifically identified. If the not-effective previous activity is by repeal of material that is necessary to the instant measure, the most suitable approach is to add such material to another placement in the statutes. If the previous activity transferred or added material, it is important that the effect of such measure be compared to the instant one and any necessary adjustments be made.

VI. CONDITIONALLY EFFECTIVE STATUTE ACTIVITIES - RECOMMENDATIONS

During almost every regular legislative session, and sometimes in special sessions as well, the addition, amendment or repeal of provisions of Arizona Revised Statutes is made subject to various conditions. The most frequent situation is the enactment conditioned on approval of a state constitutional amendment necessary to authorize the particular statutory treatment. The technique is also employed to provide for certain changes to become effective only if the electorate approves a related change submitted by legislative referendum.

Since most of the conditional enactments do not require fulfillment of the condition within a specified time sequence, various conditional provisions are held in abeyance pending the additional activity required to effectuate the provisions. Rather than allow the indefinite continuance of pending legislation it would seem desirable to specifically limit the period in which such enactments may be activated and thus to automatically dispose of all conditionally effective legislation that has not been activated within two years of its passage. By so doing the Legislature could avoid the possibility of inadvertently causing or allowing the activation of perhaps long forgotten and possibly conflicting legislation from previous Legislatures.

It would be wise to conduct a thorough review and seek the repeal of the enactments of each Legislature since statehood and of any territorial legislation, as such might be applicable, that might produce unintended results through the effectuation of a specified condition.
