State Constitution

FIFTIETH LEGISLATURE
SECOND REGULAR SESSION

September 2012

ARIZONA LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL

INTRODUCTION

This is the thirty-eighth formal report on defects in the Constitution and laws of Arizona issued by the Arizona Legislative Council in compliance with section 41-1304.01, Arizona Revised Statutes. This report notes various problem provisions in Arizona statutory and constitutional sections.

Section III of this report indicates suggested technical changes or areas to be reviewed in preparing statutory sections for proposed legislation. These issues may require policy direction or additional information from the requesting legislator in order for Legislative Council staff to prepare legislation involving these statutes. But to the extent that staff can prepare and legislators can use the suggested technical changes in the statutes, the clarity and consistency of the statutory law can be greatly improved.

Section IV notes some technical inadequacies in the state constitution. However, these suggestions are brief since any proposal to repeal or rewrite constitution text requires the submission of a proposition to the voters and should be cautiously conducted. Since technical changes may make a ballot proposition more confusing, care should be taken in evaluating a proposed improvement against its possible negative impact on the substance of the proposition.

I. STATUTORY CODIFICATION

The Arizona Revised Statutes developed through the bulk revision of all general laws of the state under the Arizona Code Commission as authorized by the Arizona Legislature in 1951. The recodification was enacted in Laws 1955, Third Special Session, chapter 3. A twenty-volume set containing the Constitutions of the United States and Arizona, laws, court rules, tables and indexing was prepared under authority of Laws 1956, chapter 129 and included legislation enacted through the Twenty-second Legislature, Second Regular Session.

The Arizona Revised Statutes contains over twenty-two thousand separate sections of statutory law as organized into forty-nine titles. The titles are broad principal subjects that are arranged in alphabetical order except for title 1 (general provisions), title 14 (trusts, estates and protective proceedings), title 28 (transportation), title 47 (uniform commercial code), title 48 (special taxing districts) and title 49 (the environment). As appropriate, the titles are divided into chapters and subdivided into articles grouping the several sections by related subject matter.

The several titles of the Arizona Revised Statutes have not developed with uniformity in the years since they were first codified due to varied amendment activity, the addition and repeal of laws and the bulk transfers of material through departmental reorganization legislation. Statutory sections reflect a range of a dozen to eight hundred or more sections of law in the several titles of the Arizona Revised Statutes.

Provision is made in the bound Arizona Revised Statutes volumes for annual pocket parts to supplement the original code material and for annotations to reflect more recent legislative and judicial statements. Because of the bulk of supplemental material in some of the volumes of the Arizona Revised Statutes, the publisher was forced to begin to recompile statutes and annotations by reprinting. Numerous volumes have been republished since the first such project was undertaken in 1970.

In 1972, the Legislative Council reviewed this situation and established with the publisher a continuing program for the replacement of the hardbound volumes of the Arizona Revised Statutes. It was agreed that designated volumes would be selected and, as appropriate, the material divided before republication to make provision for future growth. This decision to authorize scheduled republication, as well as ongoing statute revision, avoids costly multiyear bulk statutory revision projects.

The current hardbound set of Arizona Revised Statutes materials consists of the following:

II. STATUTORY REVISION AND IMPROVEMENT

To maintain the quality of the Arizona Revised Statutes, the Legislature has granted continuing revision authority to the Arizona Legislative Council. As necessary, certain problems with section headings, typographical errors and multiple amendment and placement difficulties in newly enacted laws may be corrected under this revision authority.

Revision Authority

Minor irregularities in the statutes frequently result from an incomplete rewrite of the law or a hasty amendment. Under the revision authority of sections 41-1304.01 and 41-1304.02, Arizona Revised Statutes, the Legislative Council staff, in preparing new enactments for Arizona Revised Statutes publication, may renumber and rearrange newly enacted text material, make certain word substitutions and correct clerical, typographical and electronic database errors. The procedure used by the Legislative Council to revise each session's enactments is briefly described in the following paragraphs.

During each legislative session, Legislative Council receives copies of each enacted bill, or chapter. Legislative Council staff enters in the computer each A.R.S. section affected by that chapter, notes whether the section is added, repealed, amended, transferred or renumbered, or both, and notes the effective date of the activity or whether it is conditional. This information becomes the Table of Sections Affected.

The Table of Sections Affected has several uses. It identifies sections with duplicate numbers, sections that are amended more than once and sections that have been both amended and repealed by different chapters. It is also useful in checking publication of the A.R.S. material in the supplements and pocket parts or in the republished volumes to ensure the completeness and accuracy of published material and in checking the accuracy of the publisher's list of sections affected.

Legislative Council staff reads each chapter as it is received and notes apparent errors, while keeping in mind restrictive revision guidelines. Often a bill drafter finds an error in an act occasioned by amendment of a bill that he or she drafted originally. Separate staff readings of chapters is necessary because it is difficult for one reader to simultaneously locate all of the various errors in sense, typing and form when reading more than 1,000 pages of text in a rather brief time. Furthermore, the new chapters must be code-checked, or proofread against current law, because corrections in existing law are not made by way of revision authority.

Each section of a chapter must be analyzed for impact on the present statutes. A one-line repeal of a single article may result in the repeal of twenty sections contained in that article, any one or several of which may conceivably be amended by another chapter. Any error that exists in a current statute and that is unchanged in the new statute is noted for possible reference in Section III of this report but is left unchanged.

For newly enacted text, an administrative correction or recommendation for correction is not made if determining what was meant involves a possible substantive choice or if there is a misspelled or incorrect choice of a word that cannot be corrected without a substantive decision. Punctuation is not corrected unless it can be accomplished without any possibility of changing the intent.

The staff meets after chapters have been read to discuss the errors found and, if these are characterized as proper for administrative correction, to agree on the form and substance of reviser's notes for each. The revised chapters and notes are then sent to West, a Thomson Reuters business, for use in the preparation of pocket part and softbound statute materials for the ensuing year and to LexisNexis for softbound publication.

In reviewing the chapters the staff may conclude that a section that has been added, amended or repealed may be potentially defective due to a violation of the Constitution of Arizona. This may occur when the amendment of the section is not identified in the title for the chapter or an incorrect version is used in amending a section. These sections are noted for inclusion in the reviser's technical corrections bill, discussed below.

Blending Authority

After each legislative session adjourns and Legislative Council staff has reviewed all chapters, the staff prepares blends of multiple legislative activity under authority of section 41-1304.03, Arizona Revised Statutes. Blending authority is necessary because enactments of a session are deemed simultaneous and to be construed together to the extent that they are not incompatible.

In each blend proposal the two or more chapters involved must appear to be free of constitutional defect and be substantively compatible with each other. Multiple sections that cannot be blended involve sections in which the versions are inconsistent or incompatible, one or more versions have constitutional defects or one version is approved as an emergency act while the Legislature is in session and the subsequent version is amended without including the amendments made by the emergency act. For each blend West, a Thomson Reuters business, is instructed to indicate the involved chapter versions in the source note and to include a reviser's note explanation of the blend.

In the Laws 2011 enactments, 121 multiple amendment situations were blended. They involved the following A.R.S. sections and chapters:

Reviser's Technical Corrections Bill

Each year, the Legislative Council staff prepares the reviser's technical corrections bill to correct multiple, defective and inconsistent enactments from the previous session. Such enactment irregularities include defective titles, effective date problems, incorrect versions and other issues that violate the Arizona Constitution. The reviser's technical corrections bill for 2011 was Senate Bill 1419, passed as Laws 2011, chapter 238. The 2012 reviser's technical corrections bill was Senate Bill 1423, passed as Laws 2012, chapter 66.

Many additional but less serious problem sections that are not included in the reviser's technical corrections bill are either described or recommended for specific improvement in Section III of this report. The identification of statute errors or inadequacies is in itself valuable, as bill drafters and others can use the suggested improvements in preparing substantive changes for the noted problem sections. While some of these examples may seem too trivial for legislative attention there is, unfortunately, no other method for their correction.

Additionally, the staff may submit memos to provide information to the Legislative Council regarding other enactment irregularities. Such items, while suitable for correction only through the enactment of further legislation, are those deemed to be of sufficient importance to require an evaluation and explanation before inclusion in future legislative correction or improvement proposals.

If the hundreds of administrative or revision corrections and Legislative Council blends and corrections made through these described processes were not made, these problems could be addressed only by their consideration in bills before the full Legislature. The success rate of these legislative proposals in this and most states has not been notable, since it is quite difficult for these technical matters to compete for attention and support with the crucial substantive issues before each Legislature.

III. RECOMMENDED STATUTORY IMPROVEMENTS

The following statutory provisions contain defects, inconsistencies or form and style problems of which legislative staff should be aware. Please note, however, that less significant drafting errors, such as the misuse of future tense instead of present tense or passive voice instead of active voice and use of a negative subject, are not usually incorporated in this listing. It is intended instead that in any amendment of a section drafters will seek to effectuate the improvement of that text to the extent acceptable to the bill sponsor.

IV. CONSTITUTIONAL DEFECTS

It is desirable that the state constitution proclaim the legal framework of statute and case law through concise, understandable and compatible provisions. However, because the constitutional amendment process requires a vote of the people, many provisions of the text of the Arizona Constitution remain outdated or inconsistent. Since only an initiative, referendum or constitutional convention can address such problems, many items of possible improvement remain. One such area is the inconsistent use of article, part, section and paragraph designations.

Other suggested improvements are:

Article II, section 34. This section does not authorize "industrial pursuits" by counties but A.R.S. section 11-281 does.

Article IV, part 1, section 1. Subsection (3) prevents the legislature from authorizing anything except emergency or general effective dates (except for appropriations). If provision were made to direct the effective date of emergency legislation, the legislature could address problems involving time factors such as implementing provisions on July 1, the beginning of the fiscal year.

Article IV, part 2, section 4. Strike the reference to "postmaster of the fourth class", which was removed as a postal service designation in 1970 pursuant to 39 United States Code section 702.

Article IV, part 2, section 19. In paragraph (1), strike "divorces" and insert "ANNULMENTS OR DISSOLUTIONS OF MARRIAGE" and in paragraph (7) strike "crimes and misdemeanors" and insert "CRIMINAL OFFENSES".

Article IV, part 2, section 21. Strike the first sentence and rewrite the second sentence to state "THE TERMS OF OFFICE OF THE MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE ARE TWO YEARS."

Article IV, part 2, section 23. Strike "from any railroad or other corporation".

Article VI, section 14. In paragraph (9), strike "Divorce and for" and after "annulment" insert "AND DISSOLUTION".

Article VII, section 6. Strike "soldier, seaman, or marine, in the army or navy" and insert "MILITARY PERSONNEL".

Article VIII, part 1, section 6. This section requires the legislature to enact certain provisions relating to paying a recalled officer's campaign expenses. The statutory section was repealed in 1973.

Article IX, section 2. Subsections (8), (9) and (10) violate the 14th amendment of the United States Constitution. See Benjamin v. Arizona Department of Revenue (C 586227).

Article IX, section 3. In the last sentence, strike the provision requiring payment of taxes "in money only".

Article IX, section 5. This section, imposing a three hundred fifty thousand dollar state debt ceiling, has been interpreted with so many exceptions that a revision may be appropriate.

Article IX, section 11. In four places, strike "From and after December 31, 1973,".

Article IX, section 15. Strike "Commencing January 1, 1965,".

Article IX, section 16. Strike "Commencing January 1, 1967,".

Article IX, section 17. In subsection (2), paragraph (a), correct the spelling of "institutions".

Article IX, section 20. In subsection (10), strike "after July 1, 1980" and strike the last sentence.

Article IX, section 21. In subsection (4), paragraph (d), subdivision (i), after "sale" strike the comma and insert "OR" and strike "or rental" and insert "FOR ANY PERIOD OF TIME". In subsection (7), strike "beginning with the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1980".

Article IX, section 22. Before "(A)" insert "SECTION 22.".

Article X, section 3. In the last sentence of the lead-in language, after "in" insert "THIS" and strike "X contained".

Article X, section 5. Strike "three dollars per acre" and insert "THEIR TRUE APPRAISED VALUE" and strike "twenty-five dollars per acre" and insert "THEIR TRUE APPRAISED VALUE BASED ON SUSCEPTIBILITY OF IRRIGATION".

Article XI, section 5. After the first "The" insert "MEMBERS OF THE ARIZONA BOARD OF"; strike "university, and the governing boards of other state educational institutions," and insert "UNIVERSITIES"; before "board" insert "ARIZONA" and strike "of the university".

Article XI, section 6. In the first sentence, strike "university" and insert "UNIVERSITIES".

Article XI, section 8. In the first paragraph, after "common" insert "AND HIGH".

Article XII, section 3. Strike the last paragraph.

Article XIV, section 3. This provision applies only to events that were significant at the time of constitutional ratification and should be stricken.

Article XVI, section 2. Strike "as now exist under the laws of the territory of Arizona or" and strike "hereafter".

Article XX, paragraphs 3 and 9. These provisions are outdated but cannot be amended without congressional approval.

Article XXII, sections 1 through 12. These sections apply only to events that were significant at the time of constitutional ratification and should be stricken.

V. MULTIPLE ENACTMENT ACTIVITY – RECOMMENDATIONS

In order that multiple chapter treatments of a section of law during a single legislative session will not destroy each other, the courts generally have construed the various versions of such sections together to reconcile them, give effect to each and avoid implied repeals. Since, however, the courts may find any such enactments to be irreconcilable, to the extent that a later enactment can be altered while in progress in order to avert the need of any litigation, the legislation should be modified to clarify the legislative intent involved in the instant enactment vis-a-vis previous enactments of the session.

If a previous measure that has become effective has added, amended or transferred a section that is to be dealt with in the instant measure:

1. The current activity should be interpreted in regard to the previous enactment.
2. If the respective versions are compatible, the instant one should amend the previous one. For reader convenience, even if the previous enactment is effective because of an emergency clause, it is preferable to use the citation to the new enactment:

"Section 4-101, Arizona Revised Statutes, as amended by Laws 2012, chapter 20, section 1".

Alternatively, the previously enacted version may be repealed and its contents incorporated into a new version of law.

3. An intended transfer and renumbering or repeal of material should be reviewed in conjunction with the previous activity and, as appropriate, be provided for through specific citation to the previous enactment.

If a previous measure that is not currently effective will become effective before or contemporaneously with the instant one, the treatments outlined above are applicable, except that while it is desirable that the different versions be worked together they may be independent of one another if not conflicting and if the previous version is used as the basis for the current activity it should be specifically cited.

Sections that have been repealed earlier in a legislative session should not be amended, transferred or incorporated by internal reference in a later measure. If the repeal has already taken effect, a new section may be added to the statutes in the same or similar placement. If the repealed material needs mere reinstatement for use with the instant proposal, the repeal, if not yet effective, may be repealed and a statement of the specific intention of reestablishing the previous section included in the instant measure, but preferably a new section that duplicates the text of the prior one should be added to the statutes. If any change is anticipated in the text of the prior provision, it is always desirable to add the new section to the statutes to replace the repealed one.

Chapters enacted earlier in a legislative session that make additions to the statutes should be considered as to possible conflicts with the instant measure. However, mere duplication in the use of Arizona Revised Statutes numbering in the addition of nonconflicting new material does not create a difficulty since the Legislative Council revision authority allows such material to be renumbered.

If a statute that is to be treated in the instant measure has been handled by a previous enactment that delayed the effectiveness of involved provisions, the current situation is rather complex. It may well be necessary to handle both the currently effective provision and the one that awaits delayed effectiveness. In so doing, each version treated must be specifically identified. If the not-effective previous activity is by repeal of material that is necessary to the instant measure, the most suitable approach is to add such material to another placement in the statutes. If the previous activity transferred or added material, it is important that the effect of such measure be compared to the instant one and any necessary adjustments be made.

VI. CONDITIONALLY EFFECTIVE STATUTE ACTIVITIES – RECOMMENDATIONS

Frequently, the addition, amendment or repeal of provisions of Arizona Revised Statutes is made subject to various conditions. The most common situation is the enactment conditioned on approval of a state constitutional amendment necessary to authorize the particular statutory treatment. The technique is also employed to provide for certain changes to become effective only if the voters approve a related change submitted by legislative referendum.

Conditional enactments often do not require fulfillment of the condition within a specified time, resulting in many conditional sections that are deferred indefinitely pending performance of the condition required to make them effective. Rather than allow the indefinite continuance of pending legislation, it is preferable to specifically limit the period in which such enactments may be activated and to automatically dispose of conditionally effective legislation that has not been activated within two years of its passage. By doing so the Legislature could avoid the possibility of inadvertently causing or allowing long-forgotten and possibly conflicting legislation from previous Legislatures to become effective.

It would be wise to conduct a thorough review and seek the repeal of the enactments of each Legislature since statehood and of any territorial legislation, as such might be applicable, that might produce unintended results through the effectuation of a specified condition.
