

Annual Report on Defects in the Arizona Revised Statutes and State Constitution

September 2025

ARIZONA LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL

INTRODUCTION

This is the fifty-first formal annual report on defects in the Constitution and laws of Arizona, which the Arizona Legislative Council issues to comply with section 41-1304.01, Arizona Revised Statutes. This report notes various problem provisions in Arizona statutory and constitutional sections.

Section III of this report suggests technical changes or areas for legislative staff to review in preparing statutory sections for proposed legislation. These issues may require policy direction or additional information from the requesting legislator in order for staff to prepare legislation involving these statutes. To the extent that staff can prepare and legislators can use these recommended improvements to the statutes, the clarity and consistency of the statutory law can be greatly improved.

Section IV notes some technical inadequacies in the Arizona Constitution. These suggestions are brief, however, since any proposal to repeal or rewrite constitutional text requires a proposition to be submitted to the voters. Since technical changes may make a ballot proposition more confusing, the drafter should carefully evaluate a proposed improvement against its possible impact on the substance of the proposition.

I. STATUTORY CODIFICATION

The Arizona Revised Statutes developed through the bulk revision of all general laws of the state under the Arizona Code Commission as authorized by the Arizona Legislature in 1951. The recodification was enacted in Laws 1955, Third Special Session, chapter 3. A twenty-volume set containing the Constitutions of the United States and Arizona, laws, court rules, tables and indexing was prepared under authority of Laws 1956, chapter 129 and included legislation enacted through the Twenty-second Legislature, Second Regular Session.

The Arizona Revised Statutes contains approximately twenty-four thousand separate sections of statutory law as organized into forty-nine titles. The titles are broad principal subjects that are arranged in alphabetical order except for title 1 (general provisions), title 14 (trusts, estates and protective proceedings), title 28 (transportation), title 47 (uniform commercial code), title 48 (special taxing districts) and title 49 (the environment). As appropriate, the titles are divided into chapters and subdivided into articles that group sections by related subject matter.

The titles of the Arizona Revised Statutes have not developed uniformly in the years since they were first codified due to varied amendment activity, the addition and repeal of laws and the bulk transfers of statutory sections through departmental reorganization legislation.

The bound Arizona Revised Statutes volumes contain annual pocket parts that supplement the original code material and provide annotations that reflect more recent legislative and judicial activity. Beginning in 1970, due to the bulk of supplemental material in some of the Arizona Revised Statutes volumes, the publisher began to recompile statutes and annotations by reprinting. Numerous volumes have been republished since that first reprinting project.

In 1972, the Legislative Council, with the publisher, established a continuing system to replace the hardbound volumes of the Arizona Revised Statutes. Under this system, designated volumes are selected and, as appropriate, the material is divided before republication to provide for future growth. This decision to authorize scheduled republication, as well as ongoing statute revision, avoids costly multiyear bulk statutory revision projects.

The current hardbound set of Arizona Revised Statutes materials consists of the following:

II. STATUTORY REVISION AND IMPROVEMENT

To maintain the quality of the Arizona Revised Statutes (A.R.S.), the Legislature has granted continuing revision authority to the Arizona Legislative Council. As necessary, the Legislative Council staff may correct certain problems with section headings, typographical errors and multiple amendment and placement difficulties in newly enacted laws under this revision authority.

Revision Authority

Minor irregularities in the statutes frequently result from an incomplete rewrite of the law or a hasty amendment. Under the revision authority of sections 41-1304.01 and 41-1304.02, A.R.S., the Legislative Council staff, in preparing new enactments for A.R.S. publication, may renumber and rearrange newly enacted text, make certain word substitutions, including effective dates, and correct clerical, typographical and electronic database errors. The Legislative Council staff adheres to a restrictive procedure to revise each session's enactments.

During each legislative session, Legislative Council receives copies of each enacted bill, or chapter. Legislative Council staff notes each A.R.S. section affected by that chapter, indicates whether the section is added, repealed, amended, transferred or renumbered, or both, and notes the effective date of the activity or whether it is conditional. This information becomes the Table of Sections Affected.

The Table of Sections Affected has several uses. It identifies sections that have been enacted with the same section number, sections that have been amended more than once and sections that have been both amended and repealed by different chapters. It is also used to check publication of the A.R.S. material in the supplements and pocket parts or in the republished volumes to ensure the completeness and accuracy of published material and to check the accuracy of the publisher's list of sections affected.

Legislative Council staff members read each chapter as it is received and note apparent errors, while keeping in mind restrictive revision guidelines. Often a bill drafter finds an error in an act resulting from the amendment of a bill that he or she drafted originally. It is necessary for numerous staff members to separately read the chapters because it is virtually impossible for one reader to simultaneously locate all the various errors in sense, typing and form of more than one thousand pages of text. Furthermore, the new chapters must be code-checked, or proofread against current law, because corrections in existing law are not made by way of revision authority.

Each section of a chapter must be analyzed for its impact on the current statutes. For example, a one-line repeal of a single article may result in the repeal of twenty sections contained in that article, any one or several of which may be amended by another chapter. Any error in a current statute that results from the changes made in the new legislation is noted for possible inclusion in Section III of this report to be corrected on later amendment of that section.

For newly enacted text, an administrative correction or recommendation for correction is not made if determining the meaning requires making a possible substantive choice or if there is a misspelled or seemingly incorrect word that cannot be corrected without making a substantive decision. Punctuation is not corrected unless doing so can be accomplished without any possibility of changing the intent. Instead, these problems may be noted in Section III of this report for consideration when the relevant section is amended in the future.

The Legislative Council staff meets after reading the chapters to discuss the errors found and, if these are characterized as proper for administrative correction, to agree on the form and substance of reviser's notes for each. The revised chapters and the reviser's notes explaining the revisions are then sent to West, a Thomson Reuters business, to be published in pocket part and softbound statute materials for the ensuing year and to LexisNexis for softbound publication.

In reviewing the chapters, Legislative Council staff may conclude that a section that has been added, amended or repealed is defective because it violates the Constitution of Arizona. This may occur when an amended section is not identified in the title for the chapter or an incorrect version is used in amending a section. These sections are noted for inclusion in the reviser's technical corrections bill, discussed on page 7 of this report.

Blending Authority

After each legislative session adjourns and Legislative Council staff has reviewed all chapters, the staff prepares blends, under authority of section 41-1304.03, A.R.S., of sections that underwent multiple legislative activity during that session. Blending authority is necessary because enactments of a session are deemed simultaneous and to be construed together to the extent that they are compatible.

In each proposed blend of a section, each version of the section from the two or more chapters involved must appear to be free of constitutional defect and be substantively compatible with the other section or sections. Multiple sections that cannot be blended are those in which one version has a delayed effective date, the versions are substantively inconsistent or incompatible, one or more versions have a constitutional defect or one version is approved as an emergency act and the subsequent amended version does not include the amendments made by the emergency version. For each blended section, West, a Thomson Reuters business, is instructed to indicate the relevant chapter versions in the source note and to include a reviser's note explanation of the blend.

In the Laws 2025 enactments, 27 multiple amendment situations were blended. They involved the following A.R.S. sections and chapters:

1.	8-386	Chs. 37 and 65
2.	9-463.01	Chs. 187 and 252

Reviser's Technical Corrections Bill

Generally, each year the Legislative Council staff prepares the reviser's technical corrections bill to correct multiple, defective and inconsistent enactments from the previous session. Such enactment irregularities include sections that had defective titles or effective date problems, sections for which the incorrect version was used and sections that involved other issues that violate the Arizona Constitution. There was no reviser's technical corrections bill for 2025.

Many additional but less serious problem sections that are not included in the reviser's technical corrections bill are either described or recommended for specific improvement in Section III of this report. The identification of statute errors or inadequacies is valuable, as bill drafters and other legislative staff can use the suggested improvements when preparing substantive changes for the noted problem sections. While some of these examples may seem too trivial for legislative attention, there is, unfortunately, no other method for their correction.

Additionally, Legislative Council staff may submit memos to provide information to the Legislative Council regarding other enactment irregularities. Such issues, while suitable for correction only by enacting further legislation, are those deemed to be of sufficient importance to require extensive evaluation before being included in future legislative correction or improvement proposals.

Conclusion

If the Legislative Council staff did not prepare blends of sections that undergo multiple legislative activity or did not make the hundreds of administrative and revision corrections it makes each year, these problems could be addressed only by their consideration in future bills before the full Legislature. The success rate of these legislative proposals in this and other states has not been notable, since it is quite difficult for these technical matters to compete for attention and support with the many crucial substantive issues before each Legislature.

III. RECOMMENDED STATUTORY IMPROVEMENTS

The following statutory sections contain defects, inconsistencies or form and style problems of which legislative staff should be aware. Please note that less significant drafting errors, such as the misuse of future tense instead of present tense or passive voice instead of active voice and use of a negative subject, are not usually incorporated in this listing. In any amendment of a section, the drafter should seek to improve that text to the extent acceptable to the bill sponsor.

IV. CONSTITUTIONAL DEFECTS

State constitutions should proclaim the legal framework of statutory and case law through concise, understandable and compatible provisions. Because Arizona's constitutional amendment process requires a vote of the people, however, much of the text of the Arizona Constitution remains outdated or inconsistent. Since only an initiative, referendum or constitutional convention can address such problems, many areas of possible improvement remain throughout the Arizona Constitution. One such area is the inconsistent use of article, part, section and paragraph designations. Other suggested improvements include:

Article IV, part 1, section 1. Subsection (3) prevents the legislature from authorizing anything except emergency or general effective dates (except for appropriations). If provision were made to direct the effective date of emergency legislation, the legislature could address problems involving time factors such as implementing provisions on July 1, the beginning of the fiscal year.

Article IV, part 2, section 4. Strike the reference to "postmaster of the fourth class", which was removed as a postal service designation in 1970 pursuant to 39 United States Code section 702.

Article IV, part 2, section 19. In paragraph (1), strike "divorces" and insert "ANNULMENTS OR DISSOLUTIONS OF MARRIAGE" and in paragraph (7) strike "crimes and misdemeanors" and insert "CRIMINAL OFFENSES".

Article IV, part 2, section 21. Strike the first sentence and rewrite the second sentence to state "THE TERMS OF OFFICE OF THE MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE ARE TWO YEARS."

Article IV, part 2, section 23. Strike "from any railroad or other corporation".

Article VI, section 14. In paragraph (9), strike "Divorce and for" and after "annulment" insert "AND DISSOLUTION".

Article VII, section 6. Strike "soldier, seaman, or marine, in the army or navy" and insert "MILITARY PERSONNEL".

Article VIII, part 1, section 6. This section requires the legislature to enact certain provisions relating to paying a recalled officer's campaign expenses. The statutory section was repealed in 1973.

Article IX, section 3. In the last sentence, strike the provision requiring payment of taxes "in money only".

Article IX, section 5. This section, imposing a three hundred fifty thousand dollar state debt ceiling, has been interpreted with so many exceptions that a revision may be appropriate.

Article IX, section 11. In four places, strike "From and after December 31, 1973,".

Article IX, section 15. Strike "Commencing January 1, 1965,".

Article IX, section 16. Strike "Commencing January 1, 1967,".

Article IX, section 17. In subsection (2), paragraph (a), strike "insitutions" and insert "INSTITUTIONS". (Spelling.)

Article IX, section 20. In subsection (10), strike "after July 1, 1980" and strike the last sentence.

Article IX, section 21. In subsection (7), strike "beginning with the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1980".

Article IX, section 22. Before "(A)" insert "SECTION 22.".

Article X, section 3. In the last sentence of the lead-in language, after "in" insert "THIS" and strike "X contained".

Article X, section 5. Strike "three dollars per acre" and insert "THEIR TRUE APPRAISED VALUE" and strike "twenty-five dollars per acre" and insert "THEIR TRUE APPRAISED VALUE BASED ON SUSCEPTIBILITY OF IRRIGATION".

Article XI, section 5. After the first "The" insert "MEMBERS OF THE ARIZONA BOARD OF"; strike "university, and the governing boards of other state educational institutions," and insert "UNIVERSITIES"; before "board" insert "ARIZONA" and strike "of the university".

Article XI, section 6. In the first sentence, strike "university" and insert "UNIVERSITIES".

Article XIV, section 3. This provision applies only to events that were significant at the time of constitutional ratification and should be stricken.

Article XVI, section 2. Strike "as now exist under the laws of the territory of Arizona or" and strike "hereafter".

Article XX, sections 3 and 9. These provisions are outdated but cannot be amended without congressional approval.

Article XXII, sections 1 through 12. These sections apply only to events that were significant at the time of constitutional ratification and should be stricken.
